Art Unit: 1625

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

- A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) or 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Shah et al, US Patent 6,667,409. It discloses the instant process of separating an olefin such ethylene or propylene from a process such as epoxidation of said olefin to the olefin oxide which involves after separation of the olefin oxide, compression and cooling the gaseous effluent from said separation at least twice, followed by separating the olefin by absorbing in an absorbent, followed by separating the olefin from the absorbent by desorption. See col. 3, line 35 to col. 6, line 38. In conjunction with the above section see FIG. 2, especially parts 74, 75, 78, 80 and 82. Note that cooling is of course used along with compression. Note that small amounts of purge gas are worked with. See bottom of col. 3. Note that absorption means are disclosed for ethylene recovery. See col. 1, lines 39-42.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 1625

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Shah et al, supra. The specific conditions recited in the claims are well known and within the skill of the ordinary person in the art.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hachmuth et al, US Patent 2,353,234. See p. 4, col. 1, line 3 to p.5, col. 1, line 43. Note the multiple cooling and compression of the gas stream containing alkenes such as propene and butenes.

See also the paragraph bridging p. 1 and 2.

Claims 1-42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Shah et al in view of Hachmuth et al. The former describes the instant general process with respect ethylene oxide production. The latter teaches more specifically some of the compression-cooling absorption steps and absorption parameters.

Claims 43-45 are deemed to be allowable. They recite the conditions with a specificity to particularly correlate with applicants' unobvious improvement over the art.
